

TONIQ Suite — four plugins that process audio by note, not by frequency

A single note is a fundamental plus a stack of harmonics, so frequency-based tools cut straight through it. TONIQ detects each note and treats it as one musical object: audio to MIDI, per-note stereo placement, per-note delay and per-note reverb.

THE FOUR PLUGINS

TONIQ Extract $99
Performance to MIDI. Editable piano roll, MIDI export, drag-to-DAW, ARA in ARA-capable hosts.

TONIQ Pan $59
Places individual notes across the stereo field. Real width from mono, with no Haas delay, chorus or phase inversion.

TONIQ Delay $59
A different delay per note range, or per note — the top of a chord echoes while the bass stays dry.

TONIQ Reverb $59
A different reverb per note range. A wash on the high notes, the low end untouched.

WHY IT IS NOT A MULTIBAND

Put a multiband reverb on "the highs" and it catches the harmonics of the low E along with them. TONIQ Reverb on the high notes leaves the low E completely dry.

Analysing once in Extract produces a note map the other three read. Each also detects in real time on its own.

LATENCY, STATED PLAINLY

PLUGIN	44.1 KHZ	48 KHZ
Pan · Delay	8,192 smp · 186 ms	8,554 · 178 ms
Reverb	6,144 smp · 139 ms	6,506 · 136 ms
Extract	None — and none at all under ARA

Reported to the host and delay-compensated. Fixed: changing detection mode does not move it, and neither does bypass. These are mixing tools, not live-monitoring tools.
